Industrial Art Exhibit

Public Gets Chance to See How Textiles Are Made

At the Exhibition of Industrial Art

At the Exhibition of Industrial Art in Textiles and Costumes now being conducted at the Museum of Natural History, the general public is being let in behind the scenes to see how designs find their why into cotton, woolen and silk cloths and into fashionable wearing apparel. Not only are the processes of weaving demonstrated, but the sources of design also are shown.

The silk industry is represented by J. A. Migel, Inc., who show a jacquard loom in operation; by Cheney Brothers, who display a variety of dress and decorative silks; R. H. Mallinson & Co., whose exhibit includes a variety of fabrics and printing plates, and by the Paterson Chamber of Commerce. That Paterson is a truly silk city is demonstrated by the production figures being advertised by the chamber. Annually in Paterson there are produced more than 10,000,000 yards of tie silks, 12,775,000 yards of shirting silks, 41,900,000 yards of crope silks and 17,500,000 yards of other dress silks. The total product amounts to $215,000,000 a year. The city now contains 28,000 broad silk looms and 4,200 ribbon looms. To run these there are required 22,000 silk operatives.

Marshall Field & Co., show finished fabrics and original designs with copper printing plates used in the making of Canterbury and Colonial drapery materials.

A. Beller & Co., a prominent cloak and suit manufacturing concern, has an interesting exhibit consisting of Philippine, Siberian, Spanish and other costumes, alongside modern coats and suits, the designs for which were inspired by the museum pieces.

Beads, batik work and laces also are the marking of Canterbury and Colonial drapery materials.

How Food Prices Jumped

During the last year, from July, 1918, to July, 1919, the cost for the United States of twenty-two articles of food has increased 13 per cent. This is based on the average retail price charged in fifty cities and on the average family consumption of each article of food.
